

Yes Yes Yes to Intimate Green Solutions

Submitted by Tracey on July 27, 2010 – 4:38 pm

No Comment

If you're trying to make a baby (or indeed, if you're taking steps to prevent one arriving) and you're conscious about unnatural substances being applied where the sun don't shine, you'll be very interested to hear about 'Yes Pure Intimacy'.

It's a British made lubricant designed to make great sex a smooth operation and last year, the product scooped Small Business Winner of Triodos Women in Ethical Business Awards for its two female inventors.

It comes in two varieties, pardon the pun; oil based (non-condom compatible) and water based (condom happy label). The foundation for both is impressive, right from the moment you excitedly hold the recyclable cardboard box in your hot little hand.

There's no superfluous cellophane to get rid of and the discrete containers are made from the most commonly accepted plastic at UK recycling centres, making responsible disposal as joyful as it is to use the product.

That's the boring stuff out of the way, here are the facts that'll really make you juicy!

These are the only certified organic lubricants available today, they bear the reassuring Soil Association approval mark and they might be called 'Yes', but I love the stuff they've said 'NO' to.

There are no parabens, no hormones, no skin irritants, petrochemicals, mineral oils, paraffin, or petroleum, no glycerine or glycerol, no synthetic binders, fillers, emulsifiers or thickeners, tar, no antibiotics, steroids or phosphates, dyes, colourings or fragrances, no alcohols (please keep reading, because I bet you didn't realise these disgusting ingredients were standard in some 'other' brands...

Now where was I? Ah yes, no formaldehyde, acetone, sodium laurel or laureth sulphate. And just in case you were wondering, they don't test on animals either.

As a result of the above, one cautionary note the manufacturers make no secret of, both in the instructions and on the box, is that they are NOT contraceptives or spermicides.

Phew, I think need to lay down; what an ideal time to road test the products... (exit stage left).

(Return, flushed)...being the dedicated reporter that I am, I promise you, I left no stone unturned. To protect my modesty, I think I'll conclude my reportage by saying, 'Yes, Yes, YES!' Which funnily enough is the name of the website where you can find out more information and locate stockists.

www.YesYesYes.org

Tut, I dunno, the things I go through, for you readers...

Reviewed by Tracey Smith

Writer – Author – Broadcaster

Sustainable Living